CURRICULUM

Our bilingual literacy program is divided into three stages, carefully designed to meet the developmental needs of students at each age level. Our accompanying books feature written and drawing activities, along with stickers, complemented by video lessons, providing flexibility for both guided and independent use.

Families choosing homeschooling often opt for our tutoring services, which include doubt resolution and pedagogical support.

Schools adopting our materials gain access to an online platform with additional activities such as interactive videos and podcasts.

Our English teaching materials involves thoughtful handwriting, grammar, science, arts, and communication skills. Aligned with the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR), our teaching methodology, developed over 20 years of classroom experience, aims to foster students' independence in the learning process.

UNIT 58 Passive form – present and past tenses

Look at the table below that compares the active form and the passive form of the present and past tenses in the third person singular.

tense	active	passive
present simple	... makes	... is made
present continuous	... is making	... is being made
past simple	... made	... was made
past continuous	... was making	... was being made

Note that the verb be in the passive form keeps the same tense as the active verb.

*They built the bridge last year.
The bridge was built last year.*

B
The use of tenses in passive sentences is identical to that in active sentences. For example, for habitual actions, we use the present simple for actions that have been completed, we use the past simple, and so on. Here are a few examples using the tenses in the table.

Present simple
Gaelic football is played in Ireland. (general statement)
Brazil(ian) is served in the cafeteria. (usually)

Present continuous
A match of Gaelic football is being played between the rival teams of Galway and Kilkenny. (the match is underway)
Brazil(ian) is being served in the cafeteria. (in this moment of time)
The houses are being rebuilt after the tsunami. (in this period time)

Past simple
The internal structure of the Statue of Liberty was designed by Gustave Eiffel in the 19th century.
The road was repaired in three days. (the work is finished)

Past continuous
The road was being repaired, so we had to find an alternative route. (the work was in progress, they hadn't yet finished)
Our luggage was being checked while we were waiting in the security area.

C
The passive form can also be formed using the verb get instead of be, in particular for actions that happened unexpectedly. This use is common in informal spoken language.
Luckily, no one got injured in the crash.
We got stuck in a traffic jam.

irregular, and sesamoid bones. The tibia and tibia are examples of long bones, the carpal bones in the wrist are examples of short bones, ribs are examples of flat bones, the vertebrae are examples of irregular bones, and the patellae are examples of sesamoid bones. Sesamoid bones are bones formed after birth and that stretch over joints. Some humans actually end up with additional sesamoid bones in the hands or feet, but all of us at minimum have kneecaps.

That last point is key: everyone's bone structure is slightly different from everyone else's. Athletes often have higher bone mass densities than non-athletes, and many people have bones of different sizes and lengths than do others. The skeletal system, on average, accounts for around a third of a person's body mass and weight, but, of course, everybody's weight fluctuates too. Regardless of these differences, the skeletal system is equally important for all people.

1) It can be inferred from paragraph 1 that the author believes most people

A. cannot imagine what a skeleton looks like
B. find the study of bones uninteresting
C. do not understand all of the body systems
D. take their bones for granted
E. are afraid of skeletons

2) As used in paragraph 2, the word amorphous has the nearest antonym in

A. idiotic
B. smart
C. imagined
D. lacking
E. concrete

INSTRUCTIONS

BINGO

INSTRUCTIONS

Practice the numbers from 0 to 100 with your students prior to game begins. The students should know what the numbers represent, what they sound like and how they are written down.

Play the audio. Make sure the students understand the instructions. Help them with the bigger numbers. Make sure they don't mix 13 with 30, 14 with 40, 15 with 50, and so on.

The winner may come up when a student completes a row, a column or a diagonal line. Additionally, there can be a second winner for the student who marks all the numbers on the scorecards.

Have fun!
